William Isaac Teague

born 1813, St Helier, Jersey

died 30 January 1851, St Teath

The West Briton: 6 February 1852

On Friday last, an inquest was held at St. Teath village, on the body of William Teague. It appeared that as a labouring man named Gribble, on Wednesday week, at five o'clock, was on the cliff near Port Isaac, he saw something floating in the sea; he went down and saw it was a keg, about four gallons; he brought it home to his house in St. Teath, when he found it contained spirit; he made it known, and several people of the village partook of it and became much intoxicated.

On Thursday morning, Teague and another man, passing Gribble's door going to their work, went in, and on going up stairs found Gribble in bed drunk; a woman named Jewell was in the room at the time, and had come to purchase some of the liquor; she saw Teague's companion draw a full pint from the keg and give it to Teague, who drank nearly half of it; he then went out and went into a neighbour's house, sat down in a chair, and in about five minutes fell off, became insensible, and never spoke after. Medical assistance was obtained but he never rallied.

The other man became sick, which perhaps saved his life. The spirit was supposed to be very strong white brandy, which had been thrown overboard some days before from a smuggler, whilst pursued by a revenue cutter from Padstow.

Teague was a single man, about 38, and a mason. Verdict, - "died of apoplexy produced by drinking ardent spirits."

TEAGUE

Henry Teague agricultural labourer
son of William Teague
and Sarah Carne
born c 1814, Plymouth, Devon
died 26 September 1887, St Teath

The West Briton and Cornwall Advertiser, 29 September 1887, Thursday - The Disappearance From St. Teath - The body of the old man Henry Teague, who disappeared from Trerossal on Monday week, was discovered on the beach at Tregardock on Saturday afternoon. His coat, vest, and scarf, were found within a few yards of the body. At the inquest on Monday held by Mr. Hamley, county coroner, and a jury, of whom Mr. R. Parsons was foreman, a verdict of "Found dead on Tregardock beach" was returned, there being no evidence to show how deceased met with his death.
