

"Mr. Turnbull devoted his entire life since marriage to the comfort and care of his family giving them to the limit of his ability, those things that make for happiness and contentment. As a husband his was forever faithful, tender, loving, thoughtful, cherishing until death the wife of his youth. As a father he was a good provider, his children's best friend until his passing, and setting for them an example they needs must follow; ever ready to give them his all. It was his greatest happiness in life to gather them in his home, and their greatest pleasure to be there enjoying his unstinted hospitality and the genial warmth, companionship and love of Daddy and Mother, sisters and brothers. He often said: to help my children is my deepest pleasure. His friends were numbered by his acquaintances. His cheerfulness of disposition, his unfailing sense of humor, his, sincere sympathy when some fellow man was in distress or trouble, and his strict adherence to the Golden Rule, Do unto others as you would have them do unto you, made him loved by all with whom he came in contact.. His honesty and integrity were unimpeachable. A firm believer in Almighty God, a Christian of great faith, of beautiful ideals, he leaves a heartbroken family consoled in his passing only by the knowledge that to emulate his example will insure meeting him in Heaven, where he is today"
